Hi Helen

With Reference Shobnall Sport, Burton;

On Friday 5th June around 8pm Police received a call that social distancing and covid guidelines were being ignored at the biker bar portion of Shobnall Sports in Burton. Police attended and numerous vehicles were either in the process of leaving or began to leave as the Police made their presence felt. It was clear that there had been a social gathering of some sorts numbering maybe a dozen or more motorbike club enthusiasts. The Police on the ground were suspicious that they weren't getting the full story when they spoke to a male who was neither the licence holder or dps. It was referred to licensing and following conversations with Sean Campbell, the DPS and Justin Fuller, the licence holder it was deemed that a site visit was necessary to interrogate the CCTV and speak to those in charge. That visit took place Wednesday 10th June. It became immediately apparent that there was a portion of the premises, namely the biker bar that was not covered by the existing premise licence. The CCTV was poor and outdated and whilst it did show the congregation of people from Friday 6th June it did not appear that any licensable activity was taking place. In the circumstances it was decided that a pragmatic approach would be taken in order to have the PLH update the CCTV system, adopt a schedule of more enforceable conditions moving forward and to incorporate the biker bar section of the premises under a new premise licence application so that the premises would be compliant when lockdown restrictions were lifted. The premises has not been considered anything other than low risk from a Policing perspective historically.
